

Peter Kim Associate

Peter is dedicated to using his legal expertise to serve and assist government entities and communities nationwide to build essential infrastructure and to improve the quality of life of their residents. With a focus on providing strategic legal guidance, he helps municipalities navigate complex financial and legal challenges to achieve their development goals.

Peter is a public contract and infrastructure lawyer who serves as special counsel to public sector clients, providing expert guidance on a wide range of legal, business, risk, and financing matters. He specializes in navigating the complex alternative project delivery procurement process, offering counsel on structuring, negotiating, and administering public infrastructure projects. Peter has also represented the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) as lender's counsel in connection with its Water Infrastructure Finance and Innovation Act (WIFIA) program, supporting various projects nationwide. He works with state, municipal, and public agency clients to structure procurements and negotiate contracts for the design, construction, operation, management, and financing of public infrastructure projects. Peter's practice primarily focuses on implementing public infrastructure through alternative project delivery methods and public-private partnerships (including design-build, design-build-operate, and design-build-finance-operate models) across sectors such as water and wastewater treatment, social infrastructure, solid waste, transportation, and power and renewable energy.

CONTACT

212.820.9329

pkim@hawkins.com

INDUSTRIES

Power and Renewable Energy

Public Buildings

Solid Waste

Transportation

Water

PRACTICES

Alternative Project Delivery

Project Finance

Public-Private Partnerships

EDUCATION

Boston University School of Management, B.S.B.A., Honors Program

Temple University Beasley School of Law, J.D.

ADMISSION

Pennsylvania